DAR Names 'Good Citizen,' Elects Officers for Year

Schuylerville, Mansion Discussed by Historian

History Story about Schuylerville Mansion Must Be Written

Will be an Open Country Home on Memorial Day Weekend

by G. C. Bowditch

History about Schuylerville Mansion, which was built in 1836 and now serves as a residence for national officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was discussed by the late Mrs. G. C. Bowditch, who was born in Schuylerville and lived there for many years.

Mrs. Bowditch said that the mansion was originally built for the late Mr. and Mrs. George C. Bowditch, and that it served as a country home for the family for many years.

"The mansion was built in 1836," she said. "It was a very large and beautiful house, and it served as a country home for the family for many years."

She also said that the mansion was used as a school and as a meeting place for the Daughters of the American Revolution, who still meet there today.

"The mansion is a very important part of Schuylerville's history," she said. "It was built in 1836 and it served as a country home for the family for many years."

Mrs. Bowditch said that the mansion was originally built for the late Mr. and Mrs. George C. Bowditch, and that it served as a country home for the family for many years.

"The mansion was built in 1836," she said. "It was a very large and beautiful house, and it served as a country home for the family for many years."

She also said that the mansion was used as a school and as a meeting place for the Daughters of the American Revolution, who still meet there today.

"The mansion is a very important part of Schuylerville's history," she said. "It was built in 1836 and it served as a country home for the family for many years."

Mrs. Bowditch said that the mansion was originally built for the late Mr. and Mrs. George C. Bowditch, and that it served as a country home for the family for many years.

"The mansion was built in 1836," she said. "It was a very large and beautiful house, and it served as a country home for the family for many years."

She also said that the mansion was used as a school and as a meeting place for the Daughters of the American Revolution, who still meet there today.

"The mansion is a very important part of Schuylerville's history," she said. "It was built in 1836 and it served as a country home for the family for many years."